Joe Keller and Herbert Deever turned out defective airplane parts, causing the death of 21 pilots in World War II. Deever was sent to prison while Keller escaped punishment and became richer, growing his business. Despite this, a love affair between Keller's son, Chris, and Deever's daughter, Ann develops. Paired with the bitterness of Deever's son, George, and the guilt Chris feels about his father, events escalate toward a climax of electrifying intensity.
