About Franklin's Program:

Develop core skills with an online business administration degree. Businesses flourish when they're managed well, inside and out. Effective business management takes a 360-degree understanding of the entire operation, including finances, marketing, ethics, and corporate responsibility. With Franklin's transfer-friendly Business Administration bachelor's degree program, you'll get the broadest view of business operations, opening up a wide variety of business career paths. (Good thing, considering the average person changes jobs 10 times in a career lifetime.)

About JJC's Program:

A degree in Business Administration prepares graduates to become creative problem solvers in their workplaces. Students pursuing this associate degree will learn about accounting, economics, business law, management, finance, marketing, and computer applications. The Business Administration program at JJC is taught by faculty who understand that every business and non-profit organization values an employee who has a working knowledge of all the disciplines of a business operation. This program ensures that students enter the workforce prepared to create solutions for any challenges that can arise in managing a business. Additionally, students can take these courses in a traditional classroom setting, in hybrid format (classroom and online), as well as online only.
